

We're coming down to the wire now. Everything is basically done and we're getting ready to present tomorrow along with the rest of our class. I'm excited to see what the others have made but I'm proud of what we've done in the short time that we've been working on this project.

This journal is just to display the last second changes and issues that are inevitably going to come up when my group meets up for the last time to push this thing over the edge.

(I)

How to create a notification when a user buys/sells something resolved: Added an alert that displays when the user buys/sells something issue: Get rid of department input box and replace it with a drop down as well as add a new field that allows a user to input a title of the book.

resolved: Made it so that depending on what department you pick in the drop down, it renders the appropriate drop down for that department. I also added another input box to the sell page that allows the user to add a title to their book posting.

That's about it, we're down adding and pushing things to github and we're all very relieved. It was a lot of fun but it was very stressful and challenging working on a project of this scale in such a short amount of time. Everyone was very easy to work with and it feels good to finally be done.